MARYLAND.

The star is shining bright and strong.
Maryland! Maryland!

From unchanged lips of those who wrong
Broken the fetters of the wrong!

Maryland! my Maryland!

November first, of sixty-four;

Maryland!

Freedom's proclaimed forevermore!

Maryland!

They have said it shall be so,

And slaves' curse shall never more

Tollute thy soil, oppress thy poor!

Maryland! my Maryland!

God bless them always in the right,

Maryland!

They art now neathous in my sight!

Justice and Truth have conquered might,

And Freedom's clear and holly light!

On this is shining, strong and bright,

Maryland! my Maryland!

President Lincoln.

Mr. Whiting, in his address at Mason Hall, last evening, thus sketched President Lincoln:

"Perhaps you will expect me to say a word upon the personal qualifications of our candidate for the Presidency. I have been my good fortune to speak of the President. He is a man of great energy, hard-working men in Washington. His manners and style of dress and of living are simple and unostentatious. He puts on no airs. He is a kind, tender-hearted, and generous man. He speaks with the people. He is the friend of the people."

"He is not puffed up by the distinction of office, and assumes no superiority on account of his station. He has a frank, open, and frank, and, does not "tortoise." Perhaps this frankness, and the way he has saved him from being made responsible for his words—

"Having observed his conduct under trying circumstances, he has seemed to me to be one of the most conscientious public men I have ever known. His honesty, as you all know, is inexpressible and unshakable."

"His ability—the intellectual powers, have, I think, not been sufficiently appreciated. He takes broad comprehensive views of every subject he examines. He looks at all its bearings. He is cautious in arriving at the facts. He dares mistakes which might mislead him, or do injustice to the weak."

"His resulting powers seem to me to be of a high order. His discourse and his writings are plain but powerful. They are loaded with common sense."

"To me he seems too slow and too cautious, but for so, we must remember that what is too slow for New England may be too fast for the Western States; and the States must go together, or they cannot go at all."

"He has been called a 'fool.' But not precisely, for he has taken an onward path with firm steps. He has never looked backward since he has been born. His word, nor taken back what he has said. He still holds a question under consideration, he listens to all opinions in out of his way, and is the truest fool made."

"I do not hesitate to say that General Jackson had no more firmness than President Lincoln; but the former was guided to his conclusions (too often) by will and impulse, and the latter by reason and calculation of duty."

"It has been said that the President's overborne by the influence of the members of his Cabinet, and is thus swayed one way and the other. The instances most relied on in proof of this are the changes on the part of the cabinet questions of public policy relating to slavery, the President has gone directly against the views of Mr. Blair, and finally resigned him to resign in the Cabinet. Beyond all question, Mr. Lincoln is not, and always has been the controlling power in the Government."

"They are greatly mistaken who suppose that firmness of purpose, decision of character, and gentleness of manners are not combined in him. He is a man of decided purpose, and of course he has his will; whatever fate he may have, whatever errors of judgment he may have committed under the unprincipled difficulties of the Government, he has done his duty, and it is not for us to find fault with him. He has been called up by the Providence of God to save this people."

A Provident Barkey.

War, it is said, has a very damaging effect upon the morals of society. There are evidences of this to be found around us every day. It has so corrupted the white race that it is an everyday occurrence to see a negro in a position of authority, who was above suspicion of dishonesty, busy stealing themselves rich—General Ewing has said, "stealing themselves rich in the name of liberty."

The war is even demolishing the virtues, hereafter proverbial, of the South.

We have seen a ruined life, and it is not for us to find fault with it. We have seen that he is the author of his own misery, and that he has been called up by the Providence of God to save this people."

THE TRIAL OF COLONEL NORTH.

WATERTON, November 3.—The trial of Colonel S. North, New York State Attorney, and of Levi Cohen and M. J. Jones, was commenced to-day before the United States Military Commission, of which General Doubleday, President and Colonel J. A. Foster, Judge Advocate, Messrs. R. H. Gillette and J. D. McPherson appear as counsel for the prisoners.

The above-named parties, together with Reeves and Scheidell, are charged with conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline, and of fraud towards the United States, authorizing certain parties to cast their votes at the ensuing State and National election, with intent to defraud the trial court of its rights.

Mr. Gillette, one of the counsel for the prisoners, pleaded to the jurisdiction of the court, arguing that the court had no jurisdiction over the parties; second, over the subject-matter; third, that the matter was not within the jurisdiction of the National Government; fourth, that it is a subject over which the National Government has never jurisdiction.

The trial, which was suspended on account of the distance of about forty-five miles from Summit City, the mountain hills frosting summet to the altitude of six hundred feet above the level of the lake, being about twice as high as the iron mountains of Marquette.

The first examination was made in July last by Professor E. Dunham of Detroit. The trial was suspended on account of the remand of Marquette, and is to be continued to the 10th ult.

The trial has been adjourned to the 10th ult., and is to be continued to the 1st ult. The trial is to be held on Tuesday next.

The trial is to be held on the 10th ult., and is to be continued to the 1st ult. The trial is to be held on Tuesday next.
